Developing the Mind Supports Insight

In Buddhist practice, acquiring liberating insight goes hand-in-hand with mental cultivation. We cannot have deep insight without developing the mind, any more than a nearsighted person can see clearly without glasses. And we cannot benefit from insight without inner strength, any more than a hiker can climb a mountain without physical strength.

The three core insights of mindfulness practice are impermanence, unsatisfactoriness, and not-self. Because of their importance, these “three characteristics” are often taught enthusiastically without reference to the mental development necessary to support them. Sometimes this leads to an excessively intellectual understanding where the “insights” become merely learned concepts rather than something directly understood or seen.

Overemphasizing the three characteristics can make Buddhist practice dreary, even discouraging. For someone whose life is falling apart because of radical social or personal change, being told that everything is impermanent can be disheartening or worse. For someone whose life is filled with unrelenting suffering, learning that all is unsatisfactory takes away all hope. And for someone whose confidence and self-identity has been stripped away or was never developed, the not-self teaching can put salt in a deep wound.

The insights are best supported by a variety of inner strengths. If we don’t already have these, it is useful to cultivate them. Paradoxically, the three strengths most needed are opposite in character from the three insights. The power of mental stability enables greater insight into impermanence; the potency of well-being provides the healthy context for insight into unsatisfactoriness; and the strength of confidence keeps us balanced when we are faced with the insight into not-self.

Stability, well-being, and confidence are cultivated through Buddhist practice. For example, meditation practice stabilizes the mind; practices such as generosity, ethics, and concentration are ways of cultivating well-being; and walking the path of practice is a way to develop confidence in our personal abilities.

Mental stability is related to calm, constancy, continuity, and commitment in practice. Deep, direct insight into impermanence cannot arise in an agitated, restless mind where a preoccupation with ideas, imaginings, or memories interferes with seeing clearly. In order to perceive change it helps for the mind to be still; inner stability allows peace in the midst of change. It keeps us from being easily buffeted in times of great social and personal instability.

The term “well-being” encompasses a host of positive emotions cultivated along the Buddhist path. They include the delight, contentment, joy, happiness, and rapture that arise as we practice the path. Many practices cultivate well-being. It can arise from practicing ethical integrity and by delighting in our own goodness and good actions. Even if we have acted unethically in the past, if we learn from this and resolve to do better, our resolve can be a reason to feel good about our self. Moreover, when we know we have nothing to hide, we experience what the Buddha calls the “bliss of blamelessness,” which allows for a deep relaxation.

Acting wisely on our generous impulses also promotes our own happiness. Giving to others weakens selfishness while helping develop a positive self-regard.

One of the important functions of meditation practice is to develop joy. While it certainly should not be expected all the time, sooner or later meditation should include joy. If it doesn’t, then this can be useful to discuss with a meditation teacher.

With well-being as a support, insight into the pervasive suffering and unsatisfactoriness of much of human life doesn’t have to be depressing or frightening. Rather, it can help us direct our attention and efforts to what is truly satisfying: spiritual freedom and compassion.

Not-self can be the most difficult insight because it can be destabilizing, even frightening. However, it can be a bit like learning to ride a bicycle. At first, one may be afraid and unsteady trying to keep one’s balance. Once one has become a strong, confident rider, the fear and uncertainty disappear.

Likewise, without confidence and personal strength, the insight into not-self can be quite disorienting and uncomfortable. When we feel confident and strong, we can experience this insight with equanimity.

Sometimes the teachings on not-self are interpreted to mean one should become self-effacing and humble. While it is certainly useful to overcome conceit, Buddhist practice also involves cultivating courageous strength. The personal strengths one cultivates on the Buddhist path include integrity, honesty, patience, kindness, resolve, wisdom, and confidence. With these as a foundation, the insight into not-self has the support needed to become a

SANGHA PROGRAMS & NEWS

DHARMA MENTORING PROGRAM

For the second year, IMC is offering a one-to-one mentoring program supporting individuals’ practice with the Eightfold Path. The program begins this September and concludes next May.

The Eightfold Path represents the heart of Buddhist practice. Those who sign up for the eight-month program will have the chance to explore their practice in relation to each step of the Eightfold Path in consultation with one of IMC’s seasoned, senior practitioners. Mentoring meetings will take place once a month for an hour. They will consist of a brief period of meditation followed by discussion structured around that month’s step in the Eightfold Path. Readings, exercises, reflections, and Gil’s recorded talks pertaining to the Eightfold Path will be assigned for each month of the program. Prerequisite is completion of IMC’s five-week introduction to meditation course or the equivalent.

If you are interested, please fill out the application found in the Dharma Mentoring section at the top of the Special Events page on IMC’s website.

I felt encouraged, supported, and inspired to develop interest and confidence in the teaching and practice at a level that I had not heretofore known.

FIRST SEARCHABLE DATABASE OF INSIGHT SANGHAS

The Buddhist Insight Network (BIN) was formed two years ago as a resource base for the growing number of Insight meditation practitioners, sitting groups, and centers. Recently the BIN website has added an extensive listing of Insight groups from all over North America and Europe. You can see it here: www.buddhisticsightnetwork.org/sanghas.

Thanks to our helpful web developer, this database has a search capacity for location, program offerings, and types of teachers. This means it is simple to locate all Insight groups that share similar aspects.

Currently the website lists about 70 groups, including key information, a brief description, and photo, from each sangha. The database will grow as more Insight groups sign up to be listed.

IN GRATITUDE

Many thanks to all of you who help support IMC through your donations of money and time. Donation thank-you letters have been sent out for the first quarter of this year, January through March. If you donated money to IMC or IRC during that period — whether at the centers, through our websites, or through the mail — you should have received a letter thanking you for the donation. Please save your letter if you wish to claim the deduction on your 2013 income tax return.

Letters will now be sent to all of our generous donors at the end of each quarter: in July, October, January, and April.

We appreciate your generosity.

—Ed Drury, IMC Treasurer

CREATIVE WORKS INVITED

Contributions are invited for the 2013 issue of Passing It On: Lay Practitioners Share Dharma Wisdom, a collection of creative works reflecting the teachings found in our daily lives. Contributing authors and artists, all connected with IMC, celebrate everyday activities in ways that honor the richness and complexity of our ordinary experiences. Their personal essays, stories, poems, and art explore the challenges we face and the moments in which we rise to meet them. To see last year’s issue, go to the IMC website, beneath BOOKS AND ARTICLES click on RECOMMENDED BOOKS and scroll to the bottom of the page.

The deadline for submissions is July 30. Fiction or nonfiction should be 1,000 to 3,000 words; poetry, photos, and art will mostly remain within a page. If you are interested, please email Judy Long at imc.passingiton@gmail.com.

THE ISSUE AT HAND GOES INTERNATIONAL

Since The Issue at Hand was published 12 years ago, I have been surprised and delighted by the continued interest in it. The book is truly the product of the many people who provided so much of the work to bring it to print. In addition to those I thanked in the published acknowledgement in the book, I would like to thank the translators and editors who have translated the entire book into French, German, Spanish, and Korean — French: Philippe Daniel, Claudine Latombe, Mikael Bourges-Sevenier; German: Ursula Berg, Ronald Hechenberger, Christian Conrad; Spanish: Andrew Wallace, Ginny Contento, Miriam Matienzo, Andrea Castillo; Korean: Bhikkhu Buddharahkhiita.

I also thank those who have translated portions of the book into Italian, Portuguese, Japanese, Chinese — Italian: Dalia Sirkin, Sergio Donati; Portuguese: Patricia Gurgel Sergillo, Ricardo Sasaki; Japanese: Kohtarou Nishiyma, Yoshi Haggert; Chinese: the Theravada Samadhi Education Association, and Lina Lee.

Many more than can be named here have contributed in other ways. I thank each and every one for their generous efforts at making the book’s teachings available to so many all over the globe.

CULTIVATING COMPASSION

Compassion Cultivation Training, an eight-week course taught by Jennifer Block and Robert Cusick and offered by the Sati Center, will be held Mondays from 10:30am to 12:30pm, September 16 through November 11. This course aims to help participants develop the qualities of compassion, empathy, and kindness toward oneself and others. Developed by a team of contemplative scholars, clinical psychologists, and researchers at Stanford University, CCT combines traditional contemplative practices with contemporary psychology and scientific research to help people lead more compassionate lives. It involves instruction, daily meditation, mindfulness, and in-class interaction. Please register at sati.org.
Insight World Aid’s first overseas mission was an outstanding success. In February of 2013 a brigade of volunteers traveled to Cambodia for two weeks of travel, service in a clinic and orphanage, sightseeing, and meditation practice. The 26 men and women, from both inside and outside IMC, left the comfort and safety of their ordinary lives to help reduce suffering in the world. Although we all came from different backgrounds and had different skill sets, we teamed up to travel and work in harmony. Our time together was aided and enlivened by the teachings and practices of mindfulness and compassion. While our volunteer service benefitted several thousand impoverished Cambodians, it also had big and lasting benefits in our own lives. This first mission of IWA was a beautiful and memorable proof-of-concept of our slogan: Wisdom and Compassion in Action.

The trip involved one week of volunteering and one week of sightseeing, with meditation practices integrated throughout. Team IWA was part of a larger group of volunteers organized by the Cambodian Health Professionals Association of America. CHPAA is an organization formed by survivors of the “killing fields” (Cambodia’s holocaust of the 1970s), who provide free medical and dental care to Cambodians living in poverty. The IWA team consisted of two groups: 18 volunteers working in a temporary CHPAA health clinic in a small town; and eight volunteers living and working at a rural orphanage.

During our week of service, IWA’s medical volunteers were able to provide a great many clinical services, medications, check-ups, surgery, and dental care for several thousand Cambodians. Although conditions in the clinic were challenging—hot, dusty, noisy, and overcrowded, with suffering everywhere—the team worked together efficiently and joyfully, offering much-needed aid to those who otherwise have little or no access to quality health care. We were rewarded with countless smiles, bows, and “thank-yous,” as well as a few hugs.

Those who worked at the Wat Opot orphanage had equally challenging and heart-opening experiences. The orphanage is a special place that houses and cares for HIV-positive children who have been abandoned. The volunteers at the orphanage shared their kindness and diverse skills to nurture, educate, and entertain the children.

After our week of service we all enjoyed a visit to the spectacular ruins of Angkor Wat, a world-famous Hindu and Buddhist temple complex.

Our volunteers benefited from daily efforts to bring mindfulness and compassion into the experience. We held regular group meditations, frequent debriefings, and daily reflections on poems and quotes. We also visited a famous Buddhist monk at his temple. Our trip ended with a daylong meditation retreat where we practiced in silence and then reflected on and shared thoughts about our experience together. Overall, the trip was a challenging but unforgettable experience that touched many of our hearts deeply.

For more information and photos of our trip, see our website, insightworldaid.org.

Developing the Mind, cont’d. from front page

The path of insight and liberation does not leave us with nothing; it leaves us with the well-developed inner treasures of a steady, happy, and confident mind. When we see that this mind is, like everything else, impermanent, unsatisfactory, and not-self, it only adds to our peace and happiness.

INTRODUCTION TO LOVING-KINDNESS PRACTICE

The basic meditation practice of loving-kindness, or goodwill, will be the focus of a course taught by Dawn Neal from 7:30 to 9 pm every Wednesday from July 17 to August 21.

One of the central practices of Buddhism, loving-kindness heals anger and self-criticism while cultivating a generous heart. In this six-week course it will be taught as a practice and perspective that is integrated with mindfulness practice. The course will also touch on recent scientific research supporting the physical, emotional, and social benefits of loving-kindness and self-compassion.

Dawn Neal teaches meditation, mindfulness, and loving-kindness to patients and caregivers in clinical settings. She has practiced meditation in the United States and Asia, temporarily ordaining in Burma, and is now earning an MA in Buddhist Studies.

DEDICATED PRACTITIONERS PROGRAM 5 (DPP5) AT SPIRIT ROCK

CORE TEACHERS: ANDREA FELLA AND TEMPEL SMITH

Spirit Rock offers the Dedicated Practitioners Program (DPP) for serious practitioners of Insight Meditation to expand their understanding of the Dharma and deepen their practice. The next DPP program (DPP5) will be taught by Andrea Fella and Tempel Smith, along with other associate and guest faculty.

DPP offers a comprehensive curriculum on the Buddha’s teachings over 2 years, designed as an intensive lay practice period. In addition to 5 seven-day training retreats, participants commit to maintaining both meditative and daily life practice, working with monthly homework that includes readings, reflections and meditation instructions, maintaining contact with their interview teacher and regular meetings with study/practice partners.

Requirements for the program are 5 years of practice and 50 nights of residential retreat practice in the Insight Meditation tradition.

For more information: www.spiritrock.org/DPP. The application process for DPP5 will be open through October 1, 2013. The program begins in May 2014.
HELP IRC WHILE BUYING OR SELLING A HOME

Carol Collins is an IMC sangha member and longtime local real estate broker, now retired. If you are selling your home, she can refer you to a realtor who specializes in your area. If you are buying, she can refer you to a realtor who will help you identify properties, areas, loans, etc. Buying or selling, the realtor will make a donation in your name to our Insight Retreat Center.

Carol will be available as your consultant at no charge through the whole process. She has performed this service for sangha members in San Mateo, Santa Clara, Santa Cruz, and other Bay Area counties. If you have any questions or would like to discuss buying or selling a home, contact Carol at 408/348-1385 or carolcollins888@gmail.com.

A Benefit for Insight-Out – Healing Suffering from the Insight-Out: Lessons in Mindfulness
Saturday, July 20, 9:30am to 4:30pm. Taught by Jacques Verduin and former inmates from San Quentin Prison.

The morning will include teachings and practices that have liberated prisoners from anger, violence, and suffering. Part of the day will be taught by former inmates who have been trained to teach mindfulness, responsibility, and the skills that can give everyone a second chance. The afternoon will include a healing ritual, accompanied by music from former San Quentin choir members. The ritual will be a time to acknowledge and transform the wounds and shame associated with both committing and suffering from acts of violence.

This is an IMC sponsored benefit for Insight-Out: suggested donation $50–$150. Everyone welcome, Please bring lunch. For info: 510/847-3677, Veronica@balseiro@ sbcglobal.net. www.insight-out.org

Metta (Loving-Kindness) Daylong with Andrea Fella. Saturday, August 10, 9am to 4:30pm.
Beside Insight meditation, metta or loving-kindness meditation is a foundational practice of our Buddhist practice. It is the opening to a compassionate heart, the heartfelt wish for the well-being of oneself and others. Dedicated to cultivating friendliness and goodwill, the retreat will alternate periods of sitting and walking with instructions and discussion. The day will be primarily in silence. Recommended for both beginners and experienced practitioners. Bring lunch.

Annual Buddhist Chaplaincy Symposium
Saturday, September 7, 9 am to 5 pm.
The Sati Chaplaincy program is 10 years old! This year’s speakers: Gil Fronsdal, Paul Haller, and Jennifer Block. Vegetarian lunch included. Please preregister at www.metta4.us or call Bill, 415/567-9823. Open to all — you do not need to be a Chaplain. Break out groups on Hospital, Prison and Sangha spiritual care and Certifications.

Mindfulness of the Body Daylong with Gil Fronsdal. Saturday, October 5, 9:30am to 4:30pm.
Mindfulness of the body lies at the foundation of Buddhist meditation practice. To support building a strong foundation, the day will include a variety of teachings and guidance on practices related to the body: instruction on how to practice mindfulness of the body, detailed instruction on meditation posture as well as a period of yoga supportive of meditation practice led by Terry Lesser. No interviews. Bring lunch.

Sati Center
These events are presented by Sati Center and held at IMC unless otherwise indicated. Contact sati.org or 650/223-0311 for more information.

The Buddha’s Teachings on Personal Practice and the Public Good with Diana Clark and Gil Fronsdal
Saturday, July 13, 9:30am to 3:30pm. The Buddha addressed the social, political, and economic challenges of his time through mythic stories containing lessons as relevant for us today as they were in his time.
During this day we will explore three discourses from the Long Discourses which discuss the role of government action and personal transformation have in the well-being of our society. In the background of our exploration we will be discussing the uses of stories to convey spiritual teachings. The day will involve an interactive combination of lectures, discussion, and creative engagement with the Kutadanta Sutta, the Cakkavatti-Sinananda Sutta, and the Aganna Sutta (Long Discourses # 9, 26, and 27).

The Buddha’s Teaching on Family and Lay Life with Bhante Piyananda
Saturday, August 3, 9:30am to 4pm. 11:30am Meal Offering for Monastics and Potluck. Bhante Piyananda will share the Dhamma of family and lay life drawn from the Buddha’s teachings and his 58 years as a monk, teaching and supporting countless families and lay practitioners. We will have opportunities to listen, to laugh, to ask questions and to offer a meal.

Compassion Cultivation Training
Mondays, September 16 to November 11, 10:30am to 12:30pm. Taught by Jennifer Block and Robert Cusick. This 8-week course develops the qualities of compassion, empathy, and kindness for oneself and others. CCT combines traditional contemplative practices with contemporary psychology and scientific research to help you lead a more compassionate life. Through instruction, daily meditation, mindfulness, and in-class interaction, you can strengthen the qualities of compassion, empathy, and kindness. This course, developed by a team of contemplative scholars, clinical psychologists, and researchers at Stanford University, combines traditional contemplative practices with contemporary psychology and scientific research on compassion. Registration required, www.sati.org/compassion-training.
Buddhist Chaplaincy Training Program
Taught by Jennifer Block, Paul Haller, and Gil Fronsdal.
Begins September 13, ends in July 2014. An 11-month training program introducing a Buddhist perspective on spiritual care skills needed for being a chaplain or Buddhist teacher, or providing spiritual support for people in times of major life transitions and challenges. Registration required. More info at sati.org.

The Bramaviharas with Thanissaro Bhikkhu
Saturday, October 12, 9:30am to 4:30pm. The Brahmaniharas—attitudes of unlimited good will, compassion, empathetic joy, and equanimity—are useful tools for counteracting unskillful mind states, such as ill will and resentment, and for developing all three parts of the path to the end of suffering: virtue, concentration, and discernment. This daylong course will use readings, talks, discussions, and periods of meditation to explore the uses and limitations of these attitudes in the context of the total path. There will be a meal offering for Ajahn Thanissaro and other monastics in attendance. If you would like, please bring food to offer at that time, otherwise, please bring your own lunch.

Sati Courses at IBS
Sati partners with the Institute of Buddhist Studies in offering graduate courses in Buddhist Studies. This Fall, courses include Sutta Study and an Introduction to Pali. Info at www.shin-ibs.edu.

TEMPLE CLEANING & SANGHA GARDENING

IMC does not have a janitorial service or any other paid staff. All cleaning and groundskeeping is done by our dedicated volunteers. As part of integrating practice in daily life, we encourage you to participate in “temple cleaning.” Spend 15 minutes mindfully keeping our center clean inside and out; after the Sunday dharma talk on the first and third Sundays of the month, 11 to 11:15am, and after the Wednesday Morning Half-Day Retreat at noon.
